

A RESOURCE DIRECTORY

OF

HUMAN SERVICES

FOR

ASIAN AMERICANS

2012 EDITION

Publication of this directory is made possible through the generous support of

Citi Foundation

Asian American Federation

Dear Friends,

For over 20 years, the Asian American Federation has been publishing a resource directory of health and human service agencies that serve the Asian American community in metropolitan New York.

In this new edition, we have listings of human service agencies within the greater New York area as well as neighboring states such as New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Connecticut. In addition, this edition includes updated contact information, program descriptions, contact persons, and e-mail & website information of community agencies. An online version of this directory can be found on our website: www.aafederation.org.

Throughout the years, this directory was able to help service providers, government agencies, and the general public as a resource to tap into the human service network that aids Asian Americans on different community needs and issues. This project was made possible through the Citi Foundation and their support to help improve the quality of life for Asian Americans.

We hope you continue to use this new directory, plus the Federation's other resources to assist you now and in the future.

Sincerely,

ABOUT US

The Asian American Federation is a nonprofit organization that works to advance the civic voice and well-being of Asian Americans. We provide leadership to the Asian American community through philanthropy, policy research, and strengthening community nonprofits.

Established in 1989, the Federation represents and works with over 40 nonprofit agencies in the fields of health & human services, education, economic development, civic participation and social justice. Together, we address Asian American needs and give voice to our communities.

Asian American Philanthropy & Community Fund

A New Heritage of Giving, a Federation-sponsored initiative, encourages Asian Americans to contribute time, talents and financial resources to Asian American community organizations. This program links community assets with community needs via:

- Presentations and speaker panels on Asian American issues and ways to get involved;
- Networking events and opportunities connecting volunteers with community agencies;
- Giving circles aimed at building the next generation of philanthropists; and
- A unique resource at www.asianamericanphilanthropy.org.

The Asian American Community Fund, created and managed by the Federation, provides meaningful ways for donors to invest in programs that improve the well-being of Asian Americans. Unrestricted gifts, as well as contributions to such specific fields of interest as elder care and civic participation, are welcome. A panel of grant-making professionals is responsible for funding recommendations.

Strengthening Community Service Organizations

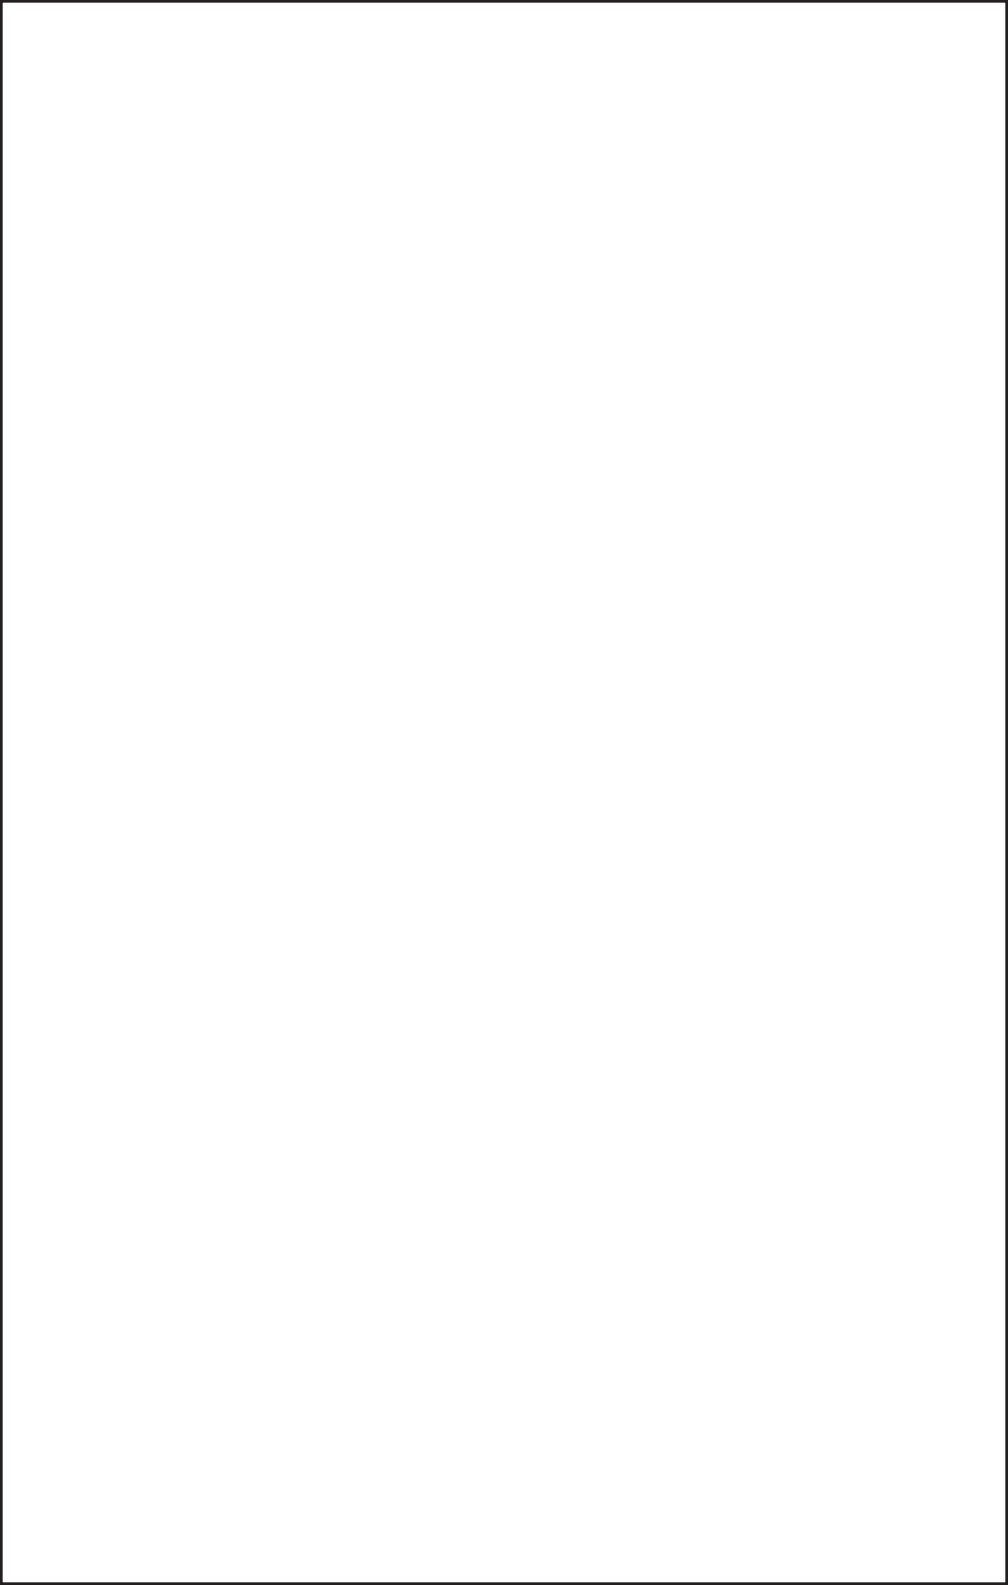

The Federation augments the ability of its member agencies to address community needs and concerns. Primary forms of capacity-building support include:

- Management and technical assistance, especially in fundraising, financial management, information technology and organizational planning, to help members increase their effectiveness and improve their business practices;
- Access to resources, such as grants, training opportunities, volunteer consultants and donated computer equipment;
- Connections and collaboration opportunities to facilitate peer support; shared arrangements; and inter-agency cooperation on advocacy, fundraising and service planning; and
- Advocacy on policy issues that affect the well-being of Asian Americans and the ability of member agencies to meet community needs.

Research

The Federation conducts studies and offers policy recommendations to address Asian American community issues, living conditions and needs. Major channels for this work are:

- Research projects, including needs assessments, program evaluations, neighborhood-based service planning and design, and community economic analyses;
- The Federation's Census Information Center (CIC), the only federally-designated Asian American-focused center of its kind in the Northeast, which offers a searchable online databank, responds to inquiries, and publishes population profiles and issue briefs; and
- Briefings, forums, and participation on committees and task forces to share research findings and census information, help implement research-based policy recommendations, and foster dialogue on issues.

AGENCY DESCRIPTION

Also-Known-As, Inc., emerged in early 1996 out of a desire to create an organization that recognized and celebrated the community of people whose lives, through adoption, bridge nations, cultures and races. Recognizing the invaluable resource and experience of adult intercountry adoptees, in May of 1996, a small group of Korean adoptees and friends in the New York metropolitan area, began planning a mentorship program targeted to a new generation of intercountry adoptees.

At the heart of Also-Known-As, Inc., is the desire to create a community where individuals would not have to be identified by their ethnicity, race or culture. Since then our mission and programs have expanded to include not only the experiences of Korean-born intercountry adoptees and families, but all families created by intercountry adoption and the unique experiences of transcultured people seeking to share the human experiences of adoption.

AGENCY DESCRIPTION

Due to language and cultural barriers, many Asian immigrants do not have access to cancer prevention information, screenings, cancer care services and patient support programs. This disparity in health care results in a high cancer related mortality. In response to this need, American Cancer Society Eastern Division launched Asian Initiatives in 2006.

Its mission is to eliminate cancer as a major health problem in Asian community of New York and New Jersey by preventing cancer, saving lives and diminishing suffering from cancer, through research, education, advocacy and services.

Founded in 1998 by low-wage South Asian immigrant workers, Andolan is a non-governmental, membership-based group that organizes and advocates on behalf of immigrant South Asian workers.

Andolan is strongly committed to a vision where all workers are respected and able to realize their rights. Andolan's goal is to support and empower working-class communities that face obstacles including language barriers, discrimination, and immigration status. Most of Andolan's members are employed as babysitters, housekeepers, and restaurant workers.

Andolan has three main program areas:

- Providing support and resources to workers through workshops, individual support, and facilitating the exchange of information among workers
- Bringing lawsuits against abusive employers
- Organizing, educating, and conducting outreach to new workers through campaigns.

AAU has worked in Philadelphia's Asian American communities and in broader multiracial coalitions around quality education, youth leadership, anti-Asian violence, immigrant rights, folk arts and cultural maintenance.

Among AAU's accomplishments are: initiating and monitoring the settlement of a lawsuit with the School District of Philadelphia to improve services to immigrant students; developing the leadership of hundreds of youth through the Community Youth Leadership Project and the Asian American Youth Workshop; creating the Chinatown Mid-Autumn Festival; and founding the Folk Arts-Cultural Treasures Charter School.

AAU is the recipient of numerous awards for services to youth, folk arts programs, organizational excellence and intergenerational leadership.

AGENCY DESCRIPTION

BABAE - pronounced "ba-BAH-eh" - is a not-for-profit organization created in 2002 to help Filipina victims and survivors of violence in the New York/New Jersey metropolitan area. BABAE, which stands for Bridging Assistance Building Advocacy & Empowerment, is also the Tagalog word for "woman."

BABAE's mission is to provide culturally sensitive case management services referring women and their families to direct service providers (e.g. doctors, lawyers, counselors, etc.) and to raise awareness of violence against Filipinas through community education and advocacy.

BABAE aims to create a voice and safe environment for all Filipinas, including immigrants and American-born Filipinas, and to ensure that women do not become lost in the legal and social service shuffle. An often overlooked and underrepresented population, immigrant Filipinas in the U.S. outnumber their male counterparts by 2 to 1. BABAE fills a gaping and growing need to provide direct services to this community of women.

The Cambodian Association of Greater Philadelphia (CAGP), the city's foundation of social, health and education programs for Cambodian refugees and their families, is the only organization of its kind, specializing in providing innovative and unique bilingual programs and services to meet the combined social, economic, health and academic needs of Cambodians in Philadelphia, many of whom are survivors of the Cambodian genocide or descendants of survivors.

In addition, we provide Cambodian cultural programs to preserve, share and integrate our distinctive and noble heritage into Philadelphia's rich cultural history. Due to the extensive, as well as grassroots nature of our programming, our nationally recognized agency directly impacts and empowers low-income individuals and communities in the greater Philadelphia area.

AGENCY DESCRIPTION

Cognitive behavior therapy (CBT) is an approach to psychotherapy, counseling and coaching that helps people to change how they think, feel and act in order to improve their mood, reduce stress, and achieve other important health and life outcomes.

Dr. Seiden's approach is "integrated" in the sense that it adheres to a "4-Psychologies" philosophy: Preventive, Curative, Positive & Transpersonal. It both addresses and goes beyond a traditional focus on problems and illness by cultivating positive goals, exploring existential concerns such as life purpose and meaning, and teaching consciousness-raising practices. Integrated CBT draws not only from cognitive behavioral theory and research, but as well from depth psychology; humanistic, positive and transpersonal psychologies; and the various Western and Eastern spiritual and meditative traditions.

AGENCY DESCRIPTION

The Cooley's Anemia Foundation (CAF) is dedicated to serving people afflicted with various forms of thalassemia, most notably the major form of this genetic blood disease, Cooley's anemia or thalassemia major. Children born with the severe form of the disease require lifelong blood transfusions as often as every two weeks and must undergo a treatment that often requires inserting a needle into the stomach or leg and pumping a drug into the body for 8-12 hours every day. Even with this extensive treatment, patients experience an early death due to organ failure.

CAF works to educate those in the Asian community about thalassemia and thalassemia trait, especially those who are thinking about having a child. CAF also has an extensive patient services program that provides physician referrals, helps patients with insurance issues, keeps patients up-to-date on recent developments and advocates with the public and elected officials on behalf of the thalassemia community.

AGENCY DESCRIPTION

Hamilton-Madison House opened its doors in 1898 as part of the settlement house movement. The organization's mission has remained consistent for more than a century. The House's goal is to provide its clients with the services they need to improve their daily quality of life while giving them a foundation for future educational, professional and social success. To accomplish these goals, Hamilton-Madison House provides services to 16,000 children and adults annually in programs that include early childhood education, youth and teen programs, adult education classes, immigrant services, bilingual behavioral health services and senior services. The House has 22 locations, 19 of which are located below Canal Street and 3 are located in Jackson Heights and Corona, Queens. 80% of the clients are immigrants whose primary language is not English. To meet the needs of this population, the House's staff of 300 speaks 12 languages including 6 Chinese dialects. Hamilton-Madison House's Behavioral Health programs are available to all New York City residents and have specific programs in Chinese, Japanese, Korean and Vietnamese. Many of the staff have lived the immigrant experience and through their personal knowledge and professional training are able to meet the needs of people looking to Hamilton-Madison House for assistance.

AGENCY DESCRIPTION

Lower Eastside Service Center, Inc. is a private, not-for-profit social service agency that has provided a wide range of behavioral and medical health services to New Yorkers since 1959.

No culture is exempt from the problems of mental illness, and when a family member has been hospitalized there is need of intensive therapeutic support in order to allow many clients to successfully remain in their home environment. In order to extend such services to the Chinese speaking community, we provide psychiatric rehabilitative treatment five days per week, four hours per day. Linkage is maintained with a network of Chinese language service providers.

Safe Horizon is the nation's leading victim assistance organization. Our mission is to provide support, prevent violence, and promote justice for victims of crime and abuse, their families and communities. Our 80 programs are located throughout the five boroughs of New York City in court houses, police precincts, schools, shelters, and community offices. Safe Horizon's first priority is the safety of those who seek assistance. Our programs work with clients to meet their needs so they can look ahead to a safe horizon.

Safe Horizon provides 24-Hour Lifelines to crime victims. The state-of-the art program is staffed by experienced professionals 24 hours a day, seven days a week including holidays. Many hotline advocates are multilingual, and all counselors are able to utilize a translation service to assist callers who speak a language not represented. Hotline advocates provide crisis counseling, safety planning, assistance with finding shelter, referrals to Safe Horizon programs or other organizations, advocacy with the police, and other crucial services.

South Asian Youth Action (SAYA!) was founded in 1996 with the mission to create social change and opportunities for South Asian youth to develop their fullest potential. SAYA! provides South Asian youth, ages 5 to 19, with safe spaces to learn, grow, play, and contribute to their communities and to each other.

Among the services provided by SAYA! are: academic and career preparation, recreational and artistic opportunities, individual and group counseling, and leadership and community organizing activities.

Each year, more than 600 young people from backgrounds as diverse as Afghanistan, Bangladesh, Guyana, India, Nepal, Pakistan, Sri Lanka, and Trinidad take part in SAYA!'s center- and school-based programs. Through its programs and advocacy efforts, SAYA! works to create broad social and systemic changes that positively impact immigrant youth.

Founded in 1984, the Southeast Asian Mutual Assistance Associations Coalition, Inc. (SEAMAAC) has over two decades of experience serving and advocating for refugees, immigrants, and asylees in the Greater Philadelphia area. Our mission is to support immigrants, refugees, and their families as they seek access to opportunities, which would advance the condition of their lives in the United States. SEAMAAC continues to bring issues affecting immigrants/refugees to the forefront for policy-makers and other health and social service agencies. SEAMAAC currently maintains programs in translation, ESL, job training, youth programs, elderly programs, truancy prevention and health (prenatal care, Hepatitis B, HIV, lead poisoning, tobacco). Annually SEAMAAC serves approximately 1,500 immigrants, refugees and asylees. We reach another 6,000 individuals from the immigrant and refugee communities, through our outreach work and various special events such as community and health fairs throughout the Greater Philadelphia Area.

NEW YORK CITY ASIAN AMERICAN CENSUS BRIEF

Produced by the Asian American Federation Census Information Center

The Census Information Center (CIC) Program is a community-based component of the U.S. Census Bureau's Data Dissemination Network. Its purpose is to facilitate access and use of census data as well as participation in Census Bureau censuses and surveys by underserved communities.

In September 2000, the Census Bureau designated the Asian American Federation as one of the 58 CICs in the country. As an official repository of Census Bureau data, the Federation receives a variety of data products, information and services directly from the Census Bureau.

INTRODUCTION

Using data from the 2010 decennial Census and the 2010 American Community Survey (ACS), this brief outlines some of the characteristics and trends in New York Metropolitan Area's growing Asian American population.¹ It features statistics on the Asian American population, ethnic composition, citizenship, educational attainment, English ability, income, poverty, housing, and health insurance coverage, and compares some key variables with New York Metro Area's total population.

POPULATION

Just over half (51 percent) of the Asian American population in New York Metropolitan Area lived in New York City. Asians made up 10 percent of the metro area's population, growing by 29 percent from 1,593,075 for Census 2000 to an estimated 2,210,654 in the 2010 Census.² The annualized population growth rate of 3.3 percent was the fastest among all major race and ethnic groups in the metro area. According to the 2010 Census, the largest Asian American groups in New York Metro Area were Chinese³ (33 percent of Asian population), Indian (29 percent), Korean (11 percent), and Filipino (10 percent), followed by Pakistani with 4 percent, Bangladeshi at 3 percent, and Japanese and Vietnamese with 2 percent each. (See Table 1 for a more detailed breakdown.) The fastest growing groups were, in order, Hmong; the "Other Asian" category which included Bhutanese, Burmese and Nepalese in 2000; Bangladeshis; Taiwanese; and Pakistanis. All of these groups more than doubled or nearly doubled in size between 2000 and 2010.

The median age for Asian Americans in the New York Metro Area was 34.8 years old, lower than the median age (37.9 years old) for the general population in the metro area. The age distribution shows that the difference in median age was largely due to a relatively lower proportion of Asians 45 years old and above. Seniors (individuals over the age of 65) were 8.5 percent of the Asian population. In the general population, seniors were 13.2 percent. Asian children (under the age of 18) were 23.3 percent, in contrast to 22.8 percent for the children in general. The working population (aged 18 to 64) was 68.2 percent of the Asian population while it was 64 percent for the general population.

CITIZENSHIP

Immigrants comprised a major proportion of the Asian American population in New York Metro Area. Immigrants were 68 percent of the Asian population while only 27 percent of New York Metro Area's population was foreign-born. Among immigrants, 54 percent of Asians were naturalized citizens, compared to 51 percent of all foreign-born in the area.

Asian immigrants were more likely to be recent arrivals than immigrants in the metro area. Among Asian immigrants, 35.4 percent arrived during the last decade, 30.4 percent arrived in the 1990s, and 34.2 percent entered before 1990. By contrast, only 32.1 percent of all metro area immigrants arrived in the 2000's, 28 percent arrived in the 1990's, and 39.9 percent arrived before 1990.

EDUCATION

Asian Americans occupied two very different ends of the education spectrum. For Asian adults⁴, 17 percent did not have a high school diploma, close to the 15 percent rate for all adults. On the other end of the educational ladder, 53 percent of Asian adults had some form of post-secondary education, compared with 37 percent of the general population.

ENGLISH ABILITY

Limited English proficiency is a major issue in New York Metro Area's Asian population. Using the Department of Justice's definition of English proficiency, 38 percent of Asians had limited English proficiency (LEP), compared to 16 percent of the entire New York Metro Area population. Chinese was the most commonly reported Asian language spoken with 595,656 speakers in the metro area, followed by 186,119 Korean speakers; 178,992 "Other Indic language" speakers; 142,549 "Other Asian language" speakers; 142,509 Tagalog speakers; 113,184 Hindi speakers; 93,949 Urdu speakers; 86,156 Gujarati speakers; 41,401 Japanese speakers; and 29,633 Vietnamese speakers. Among these groups, Chinese speakers had the highest LEP rate of 62 percent, while Hindi speakers had the lowest LEP rate of 25 percent.

POVERTY

Asian poverty⁵ rates were similar to the total population poverty rates except for elderly poverty rates. Overall, 13.8 percent of Asians lived below the poverty line compared to 13.3 percent for all metro area residents. Among children, 14.5 percent of Asians in New York Metro Area lived in poverty which was lower than the total New York Metro Area child poverty rate of 18.6 percent. While the New York Metro Area elderly poverty rate was 10.2 percent, the Asian poverty rate was significantly higher at 17.2 percent.

From the perspective of households, Asian households as a whole had a poverty rate of 11 percent, close to the 10.3 percent for New York Metro Area households in general. However, the general poverty rate masks significant differences in the types of households in poverty in the two populations. For married-couple families, families with an Asian householder had a poverty rate of 9.9 percent compared to 5.2 percent for those families in general. In single-parent households with children less than 18 years of age, 25 percent of households led by an Asian male and 28.1 percent of households led by an Asian female lived in poverty, rates not significantly different from the general population. With 63.8 percent of Asian households consisting of married-couple families compared with 46.6 percent of households in general, poverty programs aimed at Asian Americans should consider married-couple families, in addition to single parent families.

INCOME

Compared to their New York Metro Area counterparts, Asians had higher median household and family incomes⁶, but lower per capita incomes. Asians median household income was $71,635 compared to $62,305 for all households. Asian median family income was $77,832 in contrast to the New York Metro Area median family income of $75,885. Asian per capita income ($30,574) was below the metro area per capita income of $33,441. Mean earnings among full-time, year-round Asian workers were $69,294 compared to $70,130 for full-time, year-round workers in general.

HOUSING

Corresponding with the overall New York Metro Area patterns, most Asian households were homeowners with 51.6 percent owning, compared to the Metro Area homeownership rate of 54.5 percent. Housing costs were a larger percentage of Asian homeowner's income than the general population. Among households who owned their homes, 53.7 percent of Asian households had owner costs 30 percent or more of their household income, compared with 48.4 percent of metro area households who owned. Among renters, 50 percent of Asian households spent 30 percent or more of their income on rent, compared with 54 percent of their metro area counterparts.

HEALTH INSURANCE COVERAGE

New to the American Community Survey is a question about health insurance coverage. Individuals were asked if they had private, public or no health insurance coverage. Among Asians in the metro area, 62.6 percent had private insurance, 25.4 percent had public insurance, and 16.3 percent had no health insurance coverage at all. This compares to 66.5 percent with private insurance, 30.1 percent with public insurance, and 13.1 percent with no health insurance among for the general public.

CONCLUSION

New York Metro Area's Asian American population has seen a tremendous amount of change in size from 2000 to 2010. While Asian Americans may have had higher rates of post secondary education and higher household and family incomes, the community also faces higher proportions of adults without a high school education, higher rates of senior poverty, more language needs, and lower health insurance coverage than the general New York Metro Area population. Far from being the model minority, Asians in the New York Metropolitan Area face a number of major social challenges.

FOR MORE INFORMATION

To obtain a copy of our other community profiles, please contact the Asian American Federation Census Information Center, at (212) 344-5878 x219 or visit www.aafederation.org/cic/. Data citations from this brief should include the following acknowledgement: "Data derived from Census Bureau sources by the Asian American Federation Census Information Center."

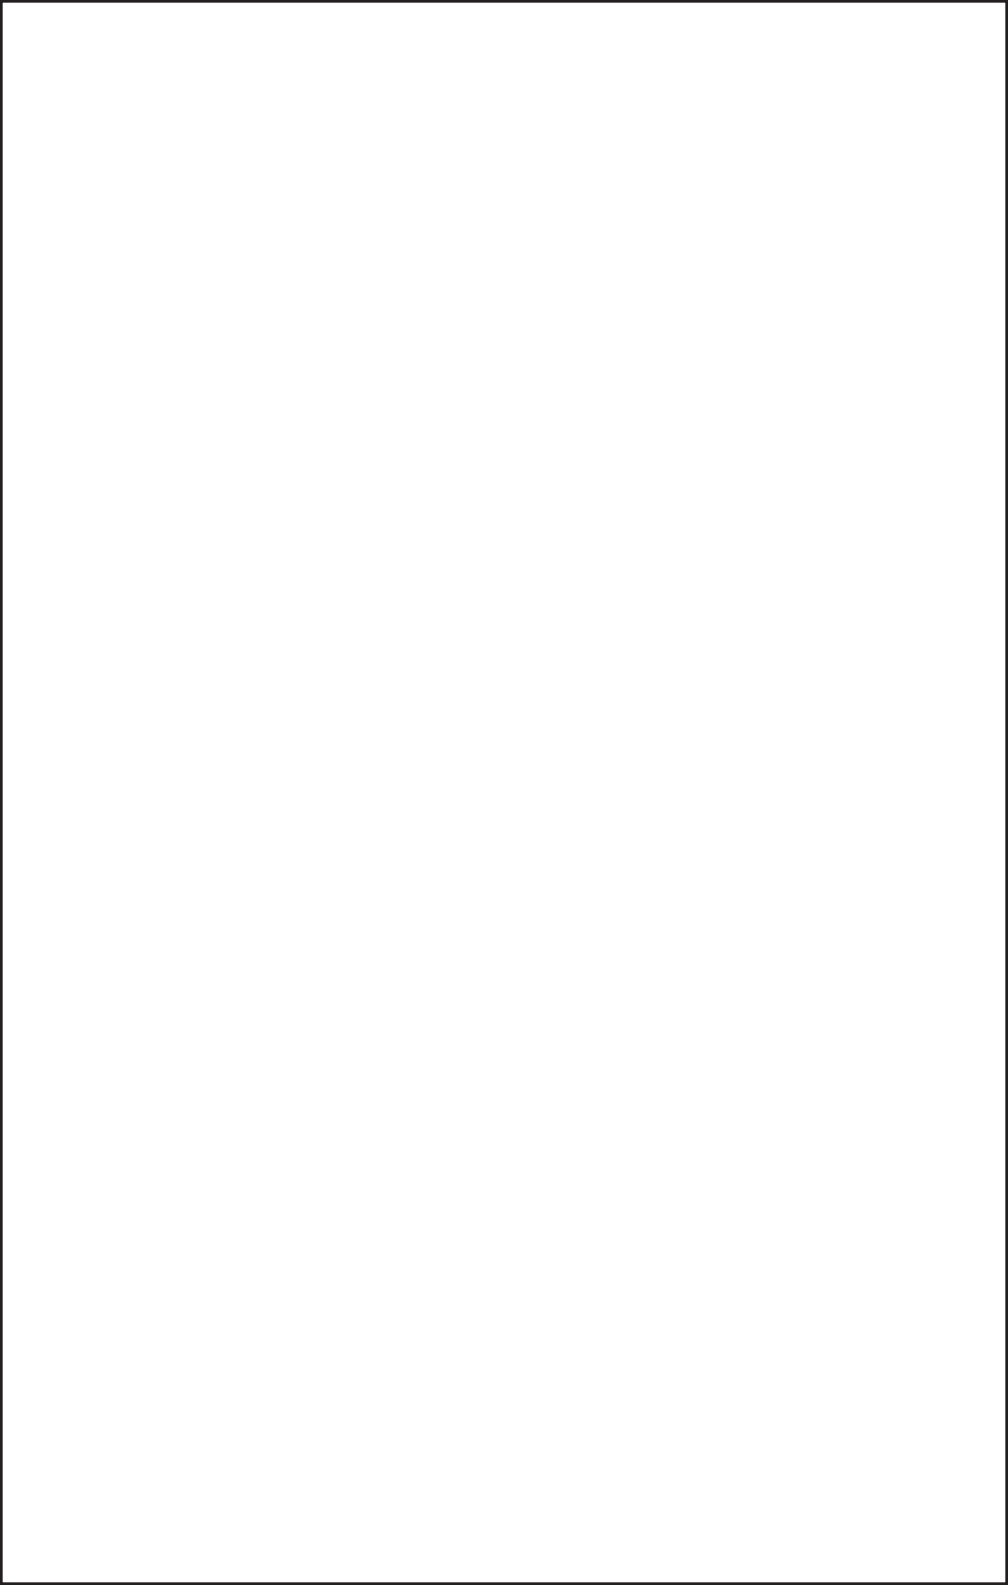

NOTES ABOUT THE DATA

The Census Bureau allowed respondents to mark more than one race. There are results for single race responses, as well as for multiple race responses. "Asian Alone" corresponds to the respondents who reported exactly one Asian group and no other Asian group or race category. "Alone" should be considered the minimum population size in any analysis that uses Census data. "Alone or in any Combination" corresponds to the responses (not respondents) that include the selected Asian group, either alone or in any combination with other Asian groups or other race categories. If a respondent selected more than one Asian group (i.e. "Korean" and "Chinese"), that individual would be tallied in the total for each Asian group; hence, some overlap in the In Combination numbers will occur. "Alone or in any Combination" should be considered the maximum population size in any analysis that uses Census data. The Census Bureau also provides annual population estimates for both Asian Alone and Asian Alone and in Combination.

FOOTNOTES

- ¹ The New York Metropolitan Area is defined here as the Office of Management and Budget's New York-Newark-Bridgeport, New York-New Jersey-Connecticut-Pennsylvania Combined Statistical Area. See <http://www.census.gov/population/www/metroareas/metrodef.html> for more information.
- ² The total population data use the Asian Alone or in Combination definition, which includes multi-racial Asians.
- ³ Chinese population numbers did not include the Taiwanese population.
- ⁴ For education tabulations, adults were defined as individuals who are over the age of 25 years old.
- ⁵ Families and persons are classified as below poverty if their total family income or unrelated individual income was less than the poverty threshold specified for the applicable family size, age of householder, and number of related children under 18 present in 12 months prior to the month of survey being taken. For these thresholds, please see the Subject Definitions Guide for the 2005 ACS.
- ⁶ A family income refers to the earnings of a group of two people or more (one of whom is the householder) related by birth, marriage, or adoption and residing together while a household income refers to the income of all the people who occupy a housing unit.
