You’ve heard of Koreatown in Manhattan but is that really where Korean New Yorkers go to eat?

All the locals know Murray Hill, Queens is the true home for NYC’s Korean culture and a diverse, growing immigrant community.

The Asian American Federation invites you to Find your Seoul in Queens Koreatown! Just 15 minutes from the Murray Hill LIRR station, the 162nd Street Corridor is a popular shopping and dining destination. With retail stores, nail salons, groceries, dance schools, Taekwondo classes, and a variety of Korean and Asian restaurants, you can get your fix of beef bone soup and a new manicure done all in one trip! Discover the tucked-away gems and come Find Your Seoul on 162nd Street!

Follow us online to learn about our upcoming fun events in the area and other ways to support local Asian-owned small businesses!

Instagram: @aafederation

This program is supported by New York City Small Business Services.